

Tennancy Issues Preceding Eviction Notice

Tenancy Agreement

1. The tenancy agreement has the name of the Landlady and does not grant her a right to anonymity.

Tenancy Agreement

Refusal to Disclose Identity as Verbally Agreed Before Tenancy

1. Request for disclosure of address and phone number, as verbally agreed before signing the tenancy agreement.
 - The caretaker called the landlady so that I could briefly speak with her as confirmation of authenticity.
 - The caretaker also promised to provide her contact number after the tenancy agreement had been signed by me.
 - The caretaker then reneged on this promise. Reason given: "I manage all of her properties to avoid tax issues. She is based in the UK."
 - In a WhatsApp chat conversation requesting the contact details of the landlady, the caretaker deliberately refused to understand the context of the conversation and started making subtle threats of eviction and asserting that she was my landlady.
 - I sent the UK-based landlady a letter via Facebook and Instagram but received no response.
 - Please see attached audio evidence related to the WhatsApp chat.
 - Happy to provide any additional or missing evidence.

You

<https://right-to-work.service.gov.uk/rtw-eua/prove>

It just occurred to me that my passport doesn't prove my UK residency.

Could you please ask the owner of the property to provide similar verification.
An NIN also works for me

The reason I requested her identity is because I sometimes work with extremely sensitive data and my clients require me to undergo background verification - that includes where I've lived in the past, what countries I've visited and my activities in that period. I

Plumbing Issue

1. The property was connected to the electricity grid while viewing.
2. The property was later disconnected after I paid for the tenancy and before I moved in.
3. The pumping machine and plumbing issues were discovered when the property was reconnected, about 2 days after reconnection to the grid (10-10-2026 to 12-10-2026).
4. I was forced to postpone my return flight to ensure the plumbing issue was resolved. This was also necessary, as I took on the responsibility of fetching water daily for my mother and her carer (from a reservoir).
5. I waited in vain for the caretaker to fulfil her obligation. Eventually, I had to return home (in the UK), leaving my mother and her carer with the responsibility and hardship of fetching unhygienic water daily from the reservoir.
6. Other issues that were promised but partially or never fulfilled include:
 - Poorly fitted and incomplete sink installation.
 - Claims by the caretaker that she purchased plumbing fittings that were stolen by her workmen.
 - Old, non-functioning door locks that were never replaced.

I was informed by security, at the gate, that NEPA officials had been in and out of the estate several times today. They were also surprised to find out that I hadn't been connected yet.

I was informed by security, at the gate, that NEPA officials had been in and out of the estate several times today. ...

It's not their business to know .
Who and who get connected.

They knew the tenant in that property had problems with the nepa bills ,why did they not say anything to me.
They ate aware that the place has been

Electricity Issue

1. The caretaker falsely claimed to have applied for a prepaid meter and promised it would be installed shortly.
2. The property was disconnected from the grid shortly before I moved in. According to the caretaker, it was because she had cleared all outstanding bills.
3. On 14-10-2025, the caretaker sent me a shocking estimated bill of N239,851.31 from Ikeja Electric.
4. The caretaker introduced me to an Ikeja Electric official who could not justify why the estimated bill was so high.
5. On probing further, the official (Kenneth – +234 807 369 8090, 15-10-2025) informed me that there had been neither an application nor registration for a prepaid meter for the property.
6. The caretaker could neither explain nor defend the fraudulent claim that she had applied for a prepaid meter before the tenancy started.

Good morning Toyin. I've noticed that the tank tends to take unusually long to fill and the water doesn't seem to last long. Could we possibly be sharing with a neighbour? Also, the pipe above the pump tends to leak water when the tap is turned. Would you know where the problem lies?

7. I sent the UK-based landlady a letter via Facebook and Instagram but received no response.

8. Happy to provide any additional or missing evidence.

Questionable Eviction Notice

1. On 16-05-2026, the caretaker informed me of her intention to serve a quit notice.
2. The reason for eviction, according to the caretaker, was based on the structural integrity of the building.
3. No structural engineer has visited the property to perform any validating structural test.
4. I contacted the Lagos State Building Control Agency (LASBCA) and was informed that a non-destructive test would be required to validate the claim made by the caretaker.
5. Assuming there is a valid claim based on the plumbing issue as presented by the caretaker, this should have been established before the property was rented out.
6. In that scenario, the caretaker was apparently aware of the issue with the property and is therefore culpable for renting out an unsafe building.

Unpermitted Entry into the Premise

1. On 25-08-2026, the caretaker visited the property without prior notice or permission. This time, she was accompanied by the alleged owner of the property and a third person with undisclosed identity.
2. This would be the second unauthorised entry into the property.
3. They falsely claimed that they had informed me and I was aware of the visit.
4. I reported the incident to the Chief Security Officer and Estate Administrator.
5. Below is a message from the caretaker regarding her unauthorised visit and my documented report to the estate administration.
