

Tennancy Issues Preceeding Eviction Notice

Tenancy Agreement

1. The tenancy agreement has the name of the Landlady and does not appear to give her right to anonymity.

Tenancy Agreement

Refusal to Disclose Identity as Verbally Agreed Before Tenancy

1. Request for disclosure of address and phone number, as verbally agreed before signing the tenancy agreement.
 - The caretaker called the landlady so that I could briefly speak with her as confirmation of authenticity.
 - The caretaker also promised to provide her contact number after the tenancy agreement had been signed by me.
 - The caretaker then reneged on this promise. Reason given: "I manage all of her properties to avoid tax issues. She is based in the UK."
 - In a WhatsApp chat conversation requesting the contact details of the landlady, the caretaker deliberately refused to understand the context of the conversation and started making subtle threats of eviction and asserting that she was my landlady.
 - I sent the UK-based landlady a letter via Facebook and Instagram but received no response.
 - Please see attached audio evidence related to the WhatsApp chat.
 - Happy to provide any additional or missing evidence.

Plumbing Issue

1. The property was connected to the electricity grid while viewing.
2. The property was later disconnected after I paid for the tenancy and before I moved in.
3. The pumping machine and plumbing issues were discovered when the property was reconnected, about 2 days after reconnection to the grid (10-10-2026 to 12-10-2026).
4. I was forced to postpone my return flight to ensure the plumbing issue was resolved. This was also necessary, as I took on the responsibility of fetching water daily for my mother and her carer (from a reservoir).
5. I waited in vain for the caretaker to fulfil her obligation. Eventually, I had to return home (in the UK), leaving my mother and her carer with the responsibility and hardship of fetching unhygienic water daily from the reservoir.
6. Other issues that were promised but partially or never fulfilled include:
 - Poorly fitted and incomplete sink installation.
 - Claims by the caretaker that she purchased plumbing fittings that were stolen by her workmen.
 - Old, non-functioning door locks that were never replaced.

Electricity Issue

1. The caretaker falsely claimed to have applied for a prepaid meter and promised it would be installed shortly.
2. The property was disconnected from the grid shortly before I moved in. According to the caretaker, it was because she had cleared all outstanding bills.
3. On 14-10-2025, the caretaker sent me a shocking estimated bill of N239,851.31 from Ikeja Electric.
4. The caretaker introduced me to an Ikeja Electric official who could not justify why the estimated bill was so high.
5. On probing further, the official (Kenneth – +234 807 369 8090, 15-10-2025) informed me that there had been neither an application nor registration for a prepaid meter for the property.

6. The caretaker could neither explain nor defend the fraudulent claim that she had applied for a prepaid meter before the tenancy started.
7. I sent the UK-based landlady a letter via Facebook and Instagram but received no response.
8. Happy to provide any additional or missing evidence.

Questionable Eviction Notice

1. On 16-05-2026, the caretaker informed me of her intention to serve a quit notice.
2. The reason for eviction, according to the caretaker, was based on the structural integrity of the building.
3. No structural engineer has visited the property to perform any validating structural test.
4. I contacted the Lagos State Building Control Agency (LASBCA) and was informed that a non-destructive test would be required to validate the claim made by the caretaker.
5. Assuming there is a valid claim based on the plumbing issue as presented by the caretaker, this should have been established before the property was rented out.
6. In that scenario, the caretaker was apparently aware of the issue with the property and is therefore culpable for renting out an unsafe building.
